KILLS GIRL AND HIMSELF IN CAB

Mervin F. Rebert, Gettysburg Business Man, Slashes Throat of Recent Town Resident and then Kills himself.

Mervin F. Rebert, the Carlisle street produce dealer, committed suicide last night in a Harrisburg cab after murdering Anna Hunsinger, of that city, with whom he is said to have been intimate for some time. News of the double tragedy was received in Gettysburg shortly after midnight.

Both the man and the woman were found dead in the cab by Charles Harbold, the driver who had taken them from the home of Bess Heffner, 11 Grace avenue, Harrisburg, to Twenty fourth and Derry streets where he had taken them before. Harbold had stopped in front of the house for a minute or more and when there was no sign of the door being opened he got down from his seat. He received no response and reached in to awaken the couple who he believed were asleep.

When he drew out his hand it was covered with blood. With a lighted match he saw that both the woman and her companion were dead. The woman's head was nearly severed from her body, while Mr. Rebert's throat was cut from ear to ear.

The killing was done with a small black-handled penknife, the blade of which was about an inch and a half long. It was ground to a razor edge, however, which accounts for the effective work it did.

Harbold's first glance showed the couple to be badly hurt, if not dead. He raced to the Harrisburg Hospital, where physicians pronounced them both dead. The bodies were taken to Spicer's undertaking rooms, where the identification was made through the police.

The couple had quarreled earlier in the evening, according to Bess Heffner, who identified the woman. While in the cellar at the Heffner place, Rebert struck the Hunsinger woman and knocked her down. The Heffner woman ordered them out and they went to the station and got a cab. This was about 11 o'clock.

They asked to be taken to Twenty-fourth and Derry streets, which was the same place they had been driven to on Thursday night, when the woman left the cab and the man was driven back to Harrisburg. After waiting a minute or two, last night, Harbold opened the door.

During the trip out to Twenty-fourth street Harbold heard no sound of either quarrel or struggle. He thinks that the deed occurred after he crossed Eighteenth street, Harrisburg, for at that point he heard what he now thinks was the breaking of a window, as the front window was found to be broken.

Rebert's body was found on a seat leaning slightly forward. The Hunsinger woman was sitting bolt upright beside him with her feet on the front seat. Her head, nearly severed, hung on her right shoulder.

Three half pints of whiskey were found. Two had fallen to the floor of the cab, while Rebert's pocket contained another. The couple had been drinking earlier in the evening at the Dauphin hotel, according to the Heffner woman, after which they went to her house, where they quarreled. It is not known what they quarreled about.

The Hunsinger woman lived here for almost a year at the home of Mrs. George Warren, mother of Edgar Warren, who is a Philadelphia and Reading trainman. They occupied one of the houses in the Winter block on North Stratton street. About three weeks ago Warren and the woman moved to Harrisburg.

A letter in Rebert's pocket written by the Hunsinger woman to him at Gettysburg and bearing a Harrisburg postmark of November 19, tells how she and Warren are situated in their new home, and ends with a request for information about young turkeys.

The news of the tragedy was telephoned to Night Policeman Emmons shortly after midnight and he at once communicated with C. Wm. Beales regarding the best way to inform Mr. Rebert's wife who lives on Carlisle street extended. Mrs. Rebert's sister, a Miss Howard, is seriously ill at the Carlisle street home and it was feared that the excitement following the breaking of the news to the wife might result seriously to the patient. Accordingly Mr. Beales went with his automobile to the Rebert home and took the wife back to his own residence where she was told as gently as possible of the awful occurrence.

She collapsed upon being told and

LARGE CROWD AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Four Hundred Sit down to Tenth Annual Banquet of the Order of Independent Americans. Long Program of Entertainment.

The tenth annual banquet of Battlefield Council 717, Order of Independent Americans, was held in their rooms on Friday evening with over four hundred present. An elaborate supper was served, five separate tables being required to accommodate all.

The banquet started at five o'clock in the evening and continued until well on toward midnight, proving one of the most successful in the history of the local council. During the evening a program was rendered, entertaining those who were waiting to be served.

The program opened with music by an orchestra composed of the following: A. B. Plank, James McDonnell, A. Z. Rogers, Ernest Ohler, Eddie Dougherty and Mrs. Bessie Timmins. Prayer was offered by Rev. G. W. Sherrick, of Shippensburg; and Burgess-elect John Raymond made an address, outlining his policies, which he declared were for the advancement and improvement of the town and could only be carried out by the hearty co-operation of the town council and citizens generally.

During the evening there were a number of readings by Frank H. Kramer, of the college, a solo by Miss Anna Hollebaugh, an organ and mandolin duet by Martha Lentz and Ellen Pipton and an address by Dr. T. C. Billheimer who spoke on the principles of the order.

Rev. G. W. Sherrick and Rev. J. B. Baker made addresses on the good done by orders like the Independent Americans. Theodore McAllister told of a personal meeting with Abraham Lincoln. William H. Frey sang several songs and told a few stories and there were recitations by the following: Ernestine Sharetts, Sarah Weaver, Helen Geiselman, Merle Stooffer, Helen Deardorff, Robert Geiselman, Lillian Kitzmiller, Geraldine Epley, and Martha Epley. Miss Mary Romberger, of Harrisburg, gave several readings and there were musical numbers by Ethel Zinzand, Edna Zinzand, and Helen Geiselman.

The evening closed with the audience singing "Bless be the Tie that Binds".

The sixteen young ladies who helped serve the supper and all those who helped in its preparation contributed largely to the success of the event.

The committee in charge consisted of the following: James Kauffman, John McDonnell, J. C. Hoke, G. W. G. Heagerty, Walter Swisher, J. Louis Sowers, Charles Stallsmith, William H. Frey, J. C. Wierman, Ira Deardorff.

HORSE STOLEN

Barn of Oliver Stull Entered and Thief Gets a Horse.

A horse belonging to Oliver Stull was taken from his barn in Cumberland township Friday night. It was a gray mare eight years old, 16 1/2 hands high, had no shoes and is described as a "long stepper". With the horse were taken a wagon saddle and a wagon bridle. Charles H. Wilson is making an effort to secure information concerning the stolen property.

Dr. H. M. Hartman was summoned. About three o'clock she was able to be taken back to her own home.

When Mr. Rebert left for Harrisburg several days ago he told his wife that he was going there on business, and she received no intimation of anything being wrong until the news of his death reached her.

For a number of years Mr. Rebert engaged in farming near Gettysburg. Later he was associated with Samuel E. Waltman in the produce business on Carlisle street and within the past few years he acquired the sole interest in the business. He is said to have had no business worries.

Mr. Rebert was between 55 and 60 years of age. He leaves his wife, who was a Miss Howard before marriage, one son, Clarence H. Rebert, of Newport, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. Ellen Sherfy of Washington, D. C. The woman killed in the tragedy leaves a son about sixteen years of age now living in Philadelphia.

The inquest in the case is being held this afternoon and Mr. Rebert's body is expected home at 9:05 this evening.

PICTURE FOR GOVERNOR

Photograph of State Police at Gettysburg Given Governor Tener.

The Harrisburg Star-Independent says: "Probably the largest photograph taken with a single negative was presented to Governor Tener at the Capitol by Col. Lewis E. Beiler, secretary of the Gettysburg semi-centennial commission. The photograph was almost nine feet long and represented the four troops of the State police. The work was that of a well-known Gettysburg photographer, W. H. Tipton, and every man could be recognized. The wonder was that the horses stood still for the picture. The men are shown in platoon formation and behind them are some of the long trains, portions of the camp and some bits of scenery of the battlefield. Another photograph presented to the Governor was one of the great camp of the veterans, considered to be a remarkable work. This picture is central about the Bloody Angle and Meade's headquarters, the Pennsylvania Memorial, the Round Tops and the camp are included. The series of pictures is historically valuable and duplicates will be preserved in the State Library."

MAY RECOGNIZE MEXICAN REBELS

Believe U. S. Contemplates Step to Eliminate Huerta.

DICTATOR SENDS FAMILY AWAY

Secretly Left Mexico City on Nov. 30 to Take Up Their Residence in Vera Cruz.

Washington, Dec. 6. — Advice received here indicated that certain foreign governments have recently reached the conclusion that the United States is again contemplating recognition of the Constitutionalists as a step toward a solution of the Mexican problem and eliminating Huerta.

There is some reason to believe, however, that this idea of other interested governments is in part due to their intense desire that the United States do something to bring relief to the situation. Their impatience at the "watch and wait" policy is well known and it is understood that there has been no hesitation on their part in making this feeling known to the United States.

The result has been a sort of indirect pressure on the administration to do something to hasten indirectly at least to solve the difficulty in Mexico. Recognition of the Constitutionalists has appeared to some European diplomats as the next likely move of President Wilson as long as this government adheres to its policy of acting only indirectly upon Huerta.

No confirmation of the reported intention to recognize the Constitutionalists could be obtained. It is regarded as likely, however, that some step will be taken to assist the revolutionists, short of actual recognition.

Advices to the state department reported that the situation in the Acapulco district is growing worse. This has been a center of anti-Americanism. Merchants from outlying districts are removing to the city of Acapulco. From Ladero it is reported that the exodus of refugees from Monterey and vicinity continues.

HUERTA'S FAMILY QUITS CITY

Left Mexico City Secretly to Take Up
Quarters in Vera Cruz.

Mexico City, Dec. 6.—The family of Provisional President Huerta is said to have gone secretly to Vera Cruz on Nov. 30.

They are now living quietly in Vera Cruz, where their presence is known to only a few of their intimate friends. The departure of the Huerta family on a special train is what gave rise to the report that the president himself had left Mexico City.

The report in regard to Huerta was based on the fact that he boarded the special train early in the morning and accompanied his family to Texcoco, a few miles out, returning later to the capital in an automobile.

PRISONERS WHIPPED

Three Negroes Get Forty Lashes at Delaware Whipping Post.

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 6.—The Delaware whipping post was once more in operation today. Three negroes hugged the post for a total of forty lashes on their bare backs. Warlen Crawford again wielded the cat-o-nine tails.

Joseph Wilson, who held his wife to the floor and beat her, got ten lashes. James Plates, who came to Wilmington three weeks ago from Elkton, Md., and stole a dozen shirts and a stove, was similarly punished. William Jackson, a housebreaker at St. Georges, got twenty lashes.

Jackson will serve three years. Plates will be incarcerated for six months and Wilson will be imprisoned four months.

WILSON HAS THE GRIP

Ordered to Remain in Bed, But His Speedy Recovery Is Predicted.

Washington, Dec. 6.—President Wilson has the grip. His cold is in his nose and throat, and his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., has ordered the president to remain in bed again.

Engagements were again canceled and the president will be confined to his room possibly tomorrow. No engagements were made for earlier than Monday.

The president's secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, said that, though the president had a little fever, his illness was yielding to treatment, and he would be out again in a few days.

Sight of Coffins Caused Suicide.

Boyerstown, Pa., Dec. 6.—The constant sight of coffins at his place of employment is believed to have prompted David Meitz, forty-five years old, to take his life by hanging himself in his barn. He was employed by the Boyertown Casket company and had charge of the shipping of caskets. This work is believed to have caused melancholia.

Killed by Fall From Bridge.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 6. — Charles Brown, of Sunbury, was killed when he fell 150 feet from the top girder of the bridge being built by the Lackawanna on the new "cut-off" at Nicholson, where he was employed as an iron worker. His widow and five children survive him.

BRIDE IS STABBED BY POISONED NEEDLE

Feels Like Wasp Sting and She Faints From Pain.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 6.—A common darning needle in the theater box occupied by Mrs. Marie H. Graff, a bride of a week, is believed to be the instrument by means of which Mrs. Graff was inoculated with a subtle poison which caused her to fall insensibly within a few minutes.

This developed with the arraignment of Armand Megaro, a Cuban student pharmacist, the other occupant of the box, on a charge of assault. The needle was submitted to a chemist. It was found near the spot where Mrs. Graff sat. Megaro stoutly asserted his innocence when confronted by Mrs. Graff on the witness stand.

She said she had felt a sting on her hand, as if she had been pricked by a pin or a needle, that her hand had quickly become numb and that the feeling spread to her arm. She left the box and went to the women's waiting room, where she fell unconscious, and was soon revived. Megaro, who sat behind her, was arrested before leaving the theater. He was held in $20,000 bail.

Mrs. and Mr. William Graff were married two weeks ago. They went to stay with friends in Newark. While taking a walk Mrs. Graff entered a vaudeville and moving picture theater for an hour's entertainment. A few minutes later a man entered the box.

She had almost forgotten his presence until her coat, which hung over the back of her chair, slipped to the carpet; she reached down for it. Instantly she stifled a scream, for she felt a sudden and sharp pain in the back of her hand.

In a few moments her arm became helpless and an overpowering feeling of faintness followed. She shuddered as she thought of the sting in her hand and looked at the man behind her, who appeared to be devoting his whole attention to the stage.

With an effort she left the box and one of the women ushers assisted her to the retiring room. After she recovered she told Police Lieutenant Farrell of the pain in her hand, which was now badly inflamed and swollen. Dr. J. Henry Clark said that she had undoubtedly been stung with a needle.

Baltimore, Dec. 6.—Lieutenant Colonel David Debois Gaillard, one of the chief engineers of the Panama canal, died at the Johns Hopkins University hospital.

Colonel Gaillard had been in a semi-conscious condition for weeks. He suffered from haemorrhaging of the arteries of the brain, brought on, it is said, by the strain of his work on the Culebra Cut, which he put through in the face of enormous difficulties.

KAISER TO PUNISH TROOPS IN ALSACE

Orders Transfer of the Entire Zabern Garrison.

POLITICAL CRISIS DENIED

Government Officials Declare the Chancellor Has No Intention of Resigning.

Donaueschingen, Germany, Dec. 6.—Emperor William ordered the transfer of the entire garrison from Zabern, Alsace, owing to the trouble between the soldiers and the citizens there.

He also directed that the court martial proceedings in connection with the recent rioting be accelerated.

The emperor's solution of the difficulty is regarded in many quarters as a two-edged sword thrust. While it removes the danger of further conflicts the people and merchants of Zabern will suffer a severe financial blow by the removal of an important source of revenue.

Later the emperor decided that the Zabern garrison should go into camp temporarily on the maneuver grounds at Hagenau, but that the troops ultimately might return to Zabern, if its inhabitants displayed a proper temper after the expected transfer to another regiment of Lieutenant Baron von Forstner, the cause of the trouble, and the retirement from active service of Colonel von Reuter, of the Ninety-ninth infantry.

The existence of a government crisis was denied by officials in close touch with the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Holweg. They declared the had no intention of resigning. The relinquishment of the post of governor general of Alsace-Lorraine by Count Charles von Wedel was considered probable unless his authority was fully restored and protected against the aggressions of the military officials.

The consultation between the emperor, the chancellor, the governor general and the general in command lasted only about an hour. The emperor left shortly after Stuttgart, and spectators at the railway station noted that he was in thoroughly good humor and apparently untroubled by the situation.

If Germany had a parliamentary regime instead of a semi-autocratic government, Dr. von Bethmann-Holweg and his cabinet already would be a thing of the past, for the motion of lack of confidence in the chancellor was passed by 293 to 54 votes, the 54 all being staunch monarchists.

But the chancellor is appointed by the emperor, and remains in office as long as he retains the emperor's confidence, and the resolution of censure, therefore, is only the expression of the reichstag's opinion and is only effective so far as it may influence the emperor.

Even so the imperial chancellor saved his post for the present his position will be singularly difficult and will be entirely without prestige. A vote of censure has been passed only once before in the history of Germany on a chancellor, and then not by anything like such a great majority, and it is believed that the fact that the emperor intervened personally after the debate is proof that he thinks his chancellor's treatment of the Zabern question distinctly weak.

Presentations Made From Net.
Surely some one who is a bit puzzled over Christmas things will be glad to know what attractive gifts can be fashioned out of remnants of net. These remnants can be picked up at the certain goods counter as well as at the department of laces, where nets are likely to be higher. Collar protectors, to keep the blouse collar from being soiled by coat or furs, are made of a strip of net or all over lace about a third of a yard or even less in width and almost a yard long. A narrow hem is run in on both sides and each end gathered up closely and finished with any kind of tassel, black silk, white cotton, gilt or a small crocheted white ball. Occasionally these protectors have a few tiny pin tucks or gatherings in the center of the scarf the height of a collar, and some conceal a tiny weight where the end tassel is put on. A bit of color may be added, but it is wisest to make the protectors so that they may be laundered.

Inspiration in Regret.
The life without regret is the life without gain. Regret is but the light of fuller wisdom from our past, illuminating our future. It means that we are wiser today than we were yesterday. This new wisdom means responsibility, new privileges; it is a new chance for a better life. But if regret remain merely "regret," it is useless; it must become the revelation of new possibilities, and the inspiration and source of strength to realize them, each other; as love increases prudence.—William C. Jordan.

Unvarnished Truth.
There was a young man very vain of his accomplishments as a preacher, who, after officiating at a certain service for a Scottish minister who occasionally had to avail himself of the assistance of probationers, was met by the old gentleman with extended hands as he descended from the pulpit. Expecting high praise, he said: "No compliments, I pray." "Nay, nay, my young friend," said the parson, "nowadays I'm glad of anybody."

New Photograph Clock.
A photograph clock has been perfected by Max Marcus, a German, after many years of labor. It not only keeps time to the second, but tells the time in a clear baritone voice. "Four o'clock!" and "Four-thirty!" says the clock in loud, distinct but very pleasantly modulated tones and the half and full hours may be repeated at will by the pressing of a button. The quarters are not spoken.

HERE WE NOTE THE DROP SHOULDER ON A COAT

Essentially plain and straight of line, the separate coat must be smart of cut. For trimming it depends more or less upon an oddly shaped rever, an attractive cuff or belt.

The novelty fabrics, in which many of these coats are made, are in themselves decorative, and few trimmings are required. Tweeds in new mixtures effectively relieved by plain materials, ratines, velours de laine and the new fur fabrics are all favored. These new fur fabrics, by the way, are some of them so much like the real skins that it is difficult to tell the difference. They are light, supple and warm. One of them—broadtail, for instance—could be used with 7983 very appropriately. Here ratine was used with cuffs, collar and revers of broadtail satin. To copy in size 36 4 3/4 yards of 42 inch material will be needed with 3/4 of a yard of broadtail.

There is something very attractive about the lines of 7978. It resembles closely a suit of Polart, made of bright blue velours de laine with trimmings of black silk braid and touches of scarlet. The buttons were centered with scarlet. The drop shoulder effect, the low belt and the turndown collar are modish and distinctive.

3 3/4 yards of 36 inch velours de laine with 5 yards of braid will be needed to make in size 36.

A SURPRISE SANTA CLAUS

HAROLD: Harold Barton called Sally's voice from the kitchen door. "Father says be sure to close and lock."

"Oh, I know all about it," called Harold from the barn.

door. "Don't bother your head about me." He turned his back and stalked into the barn, carrying a big basket filled with holly, fir boughs and mistletoe. Harold was to dress the Christmas tree and decorate the barn, for the tree was too large for the house, and the barn, which was well built, had been fitted up with stoves.

Harold and Bert Fenn put the last touches to the decorations and the tree just as the supper bell rang the day before Christmas. Dinner was early, as some cousins were to come in the evening and they had to be met at the station four miles away.

The Bentsons lived on the edge of a town at the foot of a thickly wooded mountain that sheltered many a wild animal and often human beings almost as wild.

The cousins came and soon were safely tucked away in the beds and on the sofas that were not used by the uncles and aunts, and all was quiet.

Two persons were not asleep, though. Sally was thinking: "I wonder if Harold did lock the barn up well—with all our beautiful presents there. Suppose some of the woods tramps should break in. Oh, dear, I wish morning were here!"

Harold also, rolled up on a mattress on the garret floor, remembered that, although he had locked the large doors, he had not thought about the little door, and he could not remember whether it was fastened.

Morning dawned bright and crisp. Harold helped the gardener build the fires in the stoves in the barn and then waited impatiently for Uncle John, who had promised to act as Santa Claus and who could not get there until the last moment.

The train arrived, and the smaller children were beginning to fret at the delay. "It was finally decided that they would have to do without a Santa Claus. For Uncle John had always taken that part, and no one could be persuaded to take his place.

The candles were lighted, and the family and guests trooped over to the barn. Such cries of surprise and delight there were when the big tree stood before them in a blaze of glory! When the "ohs" and "ahs" had died away a little, Harold started to make an apology for the absence of Santa.

"Santa Claus was detained," he began, when a whistling sound and then a

World Noted Sculptors Produce Marvels In the Plastic Art

Superb Decorative Statuary Fast Assuming Form at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition

PRODIGIOUS works of sculpture are now being completed in the sculptural warehouses of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Many of them have already long been finished. The works are remarkable for their imagery and vigor and for the beauty of their conception.

Not for many years will the world be enabled to enjoy so marvelous a collection of the works of contemporary sculptors. The World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago first proved that the greatest talent might be employed to produce even work of temporary value. Since then more and more attention has been given at each succeeding exposition to sculpture as a form of decoration, and now the Panama-Pacific International Exposition promises to surpass even Chicago's exquisite display.

Viewing the superb groups and individual pieces of statuary, the visitor feels like a Lilliputian who has been transported into a land of giants. Some of the great groups are of colossal dimensions. Many of these great pieces of statuary will adorn huge triumphal arches and when so placed will seem of natural size to the visitor who stands upon the floors of the exposition courts.

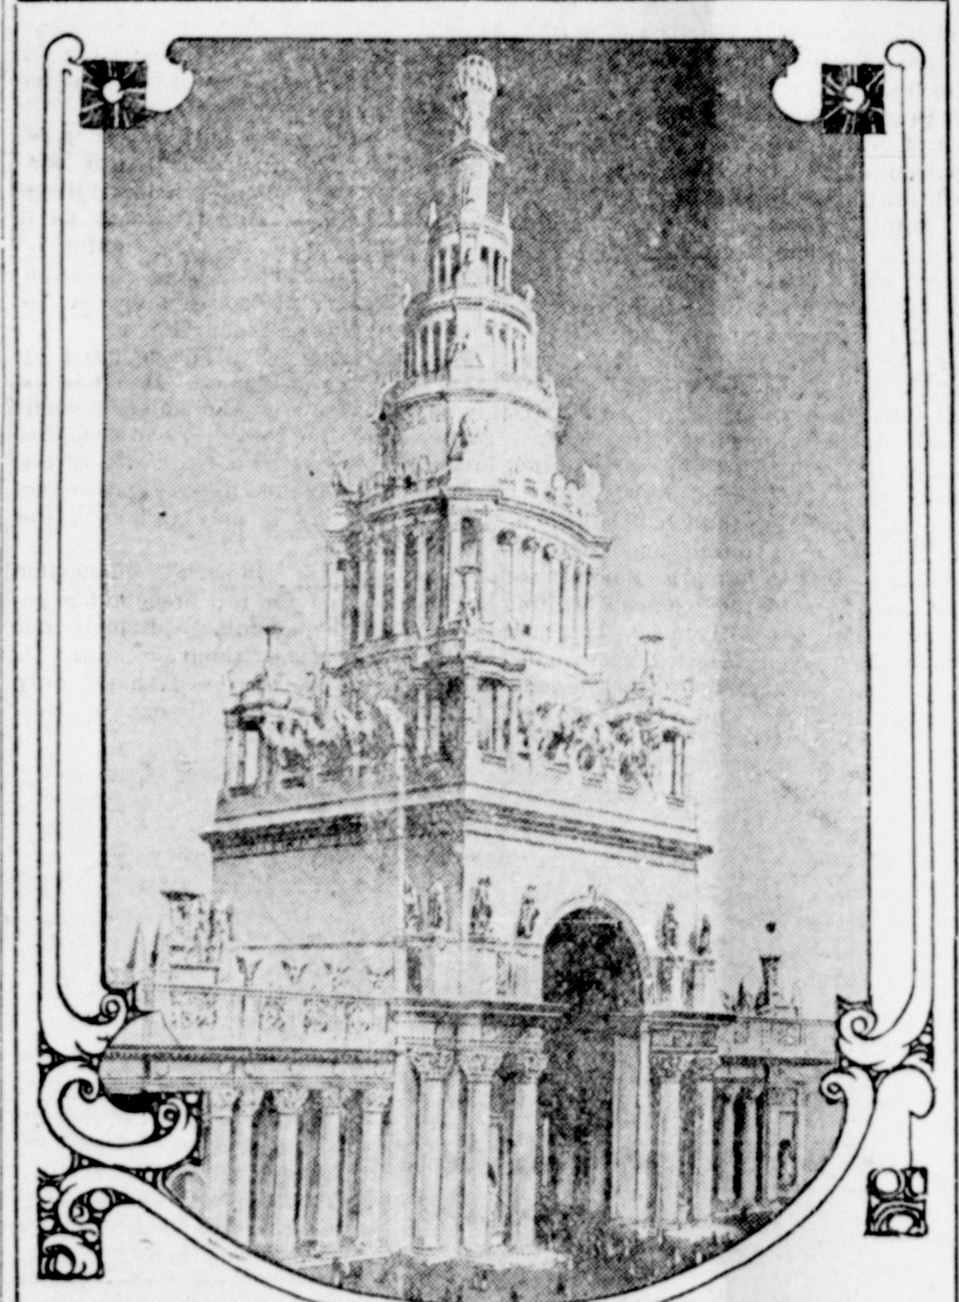

We present upon this page some classical examples of the sketch models and the enlarged figures. A number of America's foremost sculptors have been engaged in the production of these figures. Among the sculptors are many names widely known both in America and abroad. The list includes A. Stirling Calder, acting director of sculpture; Albert Jaegers, Furio Piccirilli, Leo Lentelli, Robert I. Aitkin, Adolph A. Weinman, Isidore Konti, Evelyn Beatrice Longman, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Douglas Tilden, Gutzen Borglum, H. A. MacNeil, James E. Fraser, Charles C. Rumsey, Haig Patigian, Paulanship, F. G. R. Roth, Charles Neihaus, D. C. French, Herbert Adams and others.

The sculpture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will carry out the note of the exposition in celebrating the opening of the Panama canal. The spirit of achievement as exemplified by America's work at Panama will be idealized.

When the sculptors began to plan their work they had as an inspiration an undertaking which has appealed to the imagination of the world for centuries. In the opening of the Panama canal they saw the final result of four centuries of effort to secure a passageway between the oceans. The statuary will reproduce upon a wonderful scale the historic incidents connected with the Panama canal. Figures of the early explorers of the oceans, groups symbolizing the effort to pierce the rocky backbone of the continents, compositions designed to symbolize occidental and oriental themes, colossal representations of struggle and achievement, will illustrate many of the dramatic topics inseparably associated with the search for a passageway to the Pacific and with the final building of the canal at Panama.

In no other exposition has sculpture been employed to adorn the grounds to the extent that it will be employed at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

And while the sculptors are fast completing their splendid productions, which reveal the ideals of sculptors of the present day, other work upon the exposition is fast progressing. When the gates of this, America's Panama canal celebration, swing open to the world on Feb. 20, 1915, it will be upon a fully completed and perfected spectacle, the setting of the greatest international celebration that the world has ever beheld.

A MARVELOUS SETTING FOR SCULPTURE AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO, 1915.

THE dominating architectural feature of the exposition, the superb Tower of Jewels, which will command the south entrance of the Court of Sun and Stars at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915. This tower, 430 feet in height, will have a base one acre in extent. The tower will rise upward in terraces, giving way at last to a group of figures supporting a globe, typifying the world. The repeated figures of armored horsemen and of explorers of the ocean will be used on the tower, which, with its statuary, mural paintings and mosaics, will be indescribably beautiful. Messrs. Carrere & Hastings, architects in chief of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo in 1901, are the architects.

No Whips Allowed in Moscow.

Among the curious things that arrest the traveler's attention on arriving in Moscow is the fact that drivers of cabs, carriages and all sorts of vehicles do not carry whips. There is a law prohibiting their use. The excellent condition of their horses attests the benefit of this humane law. Nowhere are there sleeker and better groomed horses than those used in the carriages of Moscow.

Not a Sea Serpent.

An exciting hunt for what was believed to be a sea serpent, took place on the Humber, off Hull, England, the other day. Rivermen, lightermen and tugmen all engaged in the hunt. The "serpent" turned out to be a bullock, which swam strongly and evaded capture for some time. It was eventually lassoed and towed ashore.

London Lost Musical Honor.

There was a period of his life in which Handel, the famous composer retired from London in a fit of disgust. He went to Dublin and it was there—in the Dublin Music Hall—that his great masterpiece, "The Messiah," was produced. "The performance," writes D. A. Chart, "was for the benefit of Mercer's hospital. In order to provide room for a large audience, ladies were requested to lay a de their hoops and gentlemen their swords. By this means an audience of 700 was crowded into the space, and the concert realized $2,000."

HIS NARROW ESCAPE

By MARY POYNTER.

"You certainly do look good to me this evening, Eleanor," said the young man with a sigh of satisfaction as he deposited his box of confectionery on the table and sank into a divan corner all with the same motion.

"Thank you," said the pretty girl with great sweetness. For an instant her eyes rested upon him meditatively, and then she hurried her bomb.

"Albert," she said, "who was the girl with whom you were walking down Michigan avenue Saturday afternoon—the afternoon you telephoned that we couldn't go to the matinee after all, because you had to work?"

"Who—me?" said the young man in rather staccato tones, sitting upright with great suddenness. An expression of utmost surprise began to show on his face.

"Did you think I was referring to my grandfather or the president of Mexico?" she inquired, crushingly.

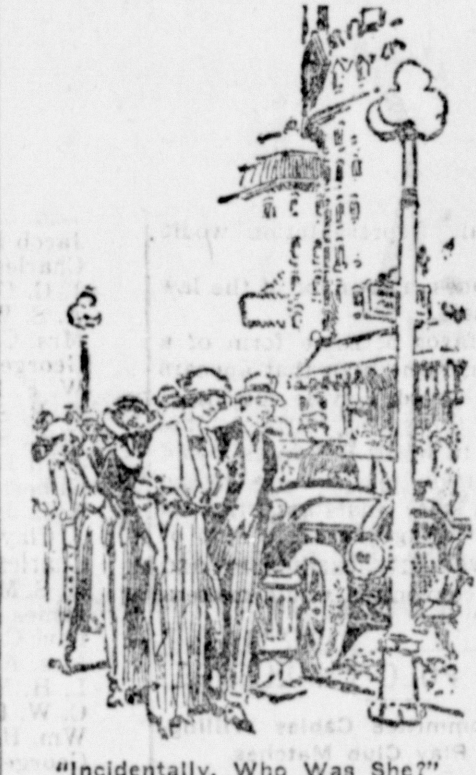

"Who," began the young man with great indignation, "told you such a ridiculous story? I don't want to reflect on any of your friends, Eleanor, but there are unscrupulous persons who don't trouble to be sure of identifications."

"I've known you two years," broke in the pretty girl, "and I'm tolerably sure of my own eyes, Albert!"

"Oh, then you saw me!" the young man murmured unthinkingly. He put up a protesting hand as she opened her lips. "Now, Eleanor!" he said, "don't be hasty! If you will stop to think, you'll remember that lives have been ruined on all sides of us just because people have jumped to conclusions! You're too broadminded, I know, to do anything like that! Why, just think—"

"I suppose that's all true," admitted the pretty girl. "But incidentally, who was she, Albert?"

The young man regarded her with a beautiful expression of reproach. He sighed as he shook his head. "I can't tell you how disappointed I am,"

"Incidentally, Who Was She?"

he breathed in tones that hinted of a stricken heart. "Really, I can't. I thought that in you I had found the one girl who understood me, and whom I could trust. I did, Eleanor. And now, this!"

"I don't see how that's got anything to do with it," persisted the pretty girl. "You break an engagement with me in order to keep one with another girl and then try to make out that you are the injured person!"

"I'm not injured," the young man told her. "I'm just disillusioned. At your lack of trust, you know."

"I want to know who that girl was," said the pretty girl, decidedly, "and what you meant by putting me off to go with her. You needn't tell me, either, that she was the cousin of the head of the firm and he had asked you to escort her to the railroad station, nor that she was a friend of your sister who had just come to town and lost her way, or—"

"Hold on!" broke in the young man. "If you take away all the excuses, you know, there wouldn't be anything to say! I'm quite willing to tell you all about her, Eleanor, and how I happened to be walking with her when I phoned you I was working—I'm willing, because my conscience is clear, and all that! By the way—what were you doing down town? You said over the phone that you were going to stay at home and practice!"

The pretty girl looked pink. "I," she murmured. Why, I went by in Bob's machine. He dropped in right after you phoned and invited me to go for a ride, with supper afterward. So I went!"

"I like that!" said the young man in a rising tide of indignation. "When you promised me that you wouldn't look at Bob, let alone go out with him! Deceiving me like that! You thought I'd never know and you see how fate has revealed your duplicity! I'm astonished at you, Eleanor. Now, will you kindly explain what you meant by doing it?"

"There isn't anything to explain!" insisted the pretty girl, a bit waveringly. "I—"

"Very well!" said the young man, getting to his feet with great dignity. "I am going now—and when you are ready to explain what you meant by such conduct you can send for me! An engaged girl acting that way! Good night!"

"Geel!" murmured the young man a minute later as he hastened down the front steps. "That was a narrow escape!"—Chicago Daily News.

Pale Blue Lobster.

The latest fad in Berlin, once noted for "plain German cooking," is to have the feast aglow with color. Pale blue lobsters, rose colored consommé and delicately tinted bread and pastry are set on the table amid a profusion of chemically colored flowers. The pale blue lobster is said to be the masterpiece of a professor, Joseph Kornfeld. This savant discovered that the lobster turned red on boiling because of the presence in its shell of the dye alizarin in natural form. This led to the conclusion that a small amount of an alkali added to the boiling water would turn the lobster blue. Further experiments showed that by the addition of iron salts and other chemicals one could have lobster in pale green, purple, violet or any other color that might be desired.

Origin of the Hall Mark.

The name of hall mark derives from the ancient monopoly of Goldsmiths' Hall in establishing the standard of gold and silver articles. In the present time the marks are more commonly known as place marks. These are in four items, a mark designating standard or quality, one indicating the office at which the assay was made, the mark indicating the year of assay, and the private mark of the manufacturer. So important are these marks on old plate that there has arisen a knavish industry of cutting out old marks from insignificant old pieces and embedding them boldly in modern fabrications. The more recent work on the subject is Chaffer's "Handbook to Hall Marks on Gold and Silver Plate," which makes it quite easy to read the record ciphered in these signs.

New Foods.

Every now and then government experts wax enthusiastic over new foods that are to lower the cost of living, promote health, postpone old age and otherwise work wonders while we wait. Reading these glowing reports, one is almost persuaded that a revolution in eating is at hand. But somehow, household bills do not become smaller; and old-fashioned meat, bread, vegetables and fruits loom up in the accounts as of yore. The truth is that even a radical age is conservative in the basic habits of life—and eating is one of these. People raised on potatoes will not abandon this food for the "dashen." People with a fondness for asparagus tips are slow converts to the use of the "udo." New foods must wait on a new generation to come to the fullness of popularity.

Capped the Lot.

It happened at a dinner in honor of a number of famous artists. Frivolity prevailed, and soon the conversation turned to art. Said one of them: "The other day I painted a little dead board in imitation of marble with such accuracy that, on being thrown into the water, it immediately sank to the bottom." "Fright!" said another. "Yesterday I hung my thermometer on the exact supporting view of the polar region. It fell at once 20 degrees below freezing point." "All that is nothing," remarked the third artist, in conclusion. "My portrait of a prominent millionaire was so lifelike that it had to be shaved twice a week."

Decries National Sport.

Dr. Sargent, the Harvard physical culture expert, is said to regard attendance at baseball games as a harmful pastime, because it stimulates the nerves without furnishing a "motor outlet"—that is, speaking psychologically, and not referring to a joy ride. He says that the case is the same as that of the overstimulated play goer. Apparently he thinks that there was less harm in the game of baseball as played in the leisurely days of old, when two and two and a half hours elapsed between the moment the umpire called "Play!" and the time the last man was out.

Got Back the Wrong Watch.

A licensed victualler who went to Wye races was relieved of his watch on that racecourse and mentioned the fact severely to that everybody knew. A few nights afterward a man came into the bar of the hotel and put down a small parcel on the counter in front of the landlord. "We didn't know it was you," whispered the customer. Winks and drinks passed. And when the landlord finally opened the parcel he found a mistake. The watch was worth thirty times the value of his own lost timepiece and had armorial carvings upon it.—London Chronicle.

Woman Band Leader.

Miss Soller is a young Swedish woman who is leading a band in Philadelphia. She is the daughter of Vladimir Soller, one of the leading bandmasters of Europe, but she insists on not telling her own first name. She has only two men in her band and is said to be a splendid disciplinarian and to insist upon the best work. She says that she never had toy, which she would have loved as other little girls, but has been playing before the public since she was five years of age, appearing at that time before the king of Sweden.

Beets Are Valuable Fertilizer.

An explanation of the improvement of European agriculture in recent years has been sought, and in Germany is attributed to soil stimulation from beet culture. From the books of eight scattered estates where beets have been grown for sugar, Dr. Lilienthal finds an increase in the yield of wheat of 5.95 bushels per acre; rye, 1.59; barley, 6.51, and oats, 5.77. Cattle have been increased, and the net income has been raised by as high as 70 per cent.

FARM ANIMALS

FEED NEW CORN GRADUALLY

If Given in Moderation at the Start Hogs Will by Degrees Get Accustomed to It.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Danger lurks in feeding an abundance of new corn. Feeders should introduce new corn gradually by cutting it up and feeding it with other feeds and with the pasture crops.

If fed moderately at the start hogs will consume both ears and stalks and by degrees get accustomed to the new feed.

By the time the stalks are hardened they will be in condition to consume larger quantities of the grain with safety and profit. Unless hogs have plenty of grass and forage crops the change of feed must be gradual if they are to escape derangement of digestion and disordered stomachs.

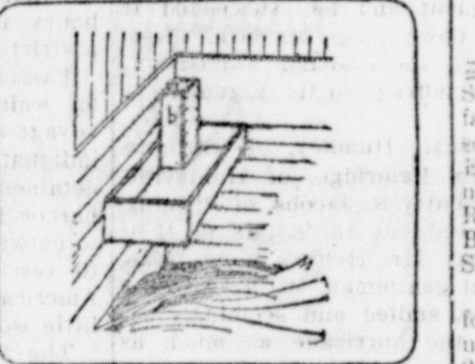

It means a little more work to feed supplemental feeds and old corn with the new, but the advantages are so great that the careful and intelligent feeder will not neglect that which is safest and promises the best results. Hogs relish new corn and we are many times tempted to feed them too much at the start. At least one month's time should be taken to bring hogs from pasture to a full feed of new corn.

It requires more bushels of new corn to make the same gain that sound corn will produce, hence it is advantageous from both the standpoint of health and profit to feed some old corn while bringing the hogs to a full feed of the new corn. Some severe losses can be avoided by the exercise of care and judgment in feeding new corn to hogs.

COMPEL HORSE TO EAT SLOW

Feed Manger Arranged So That Animal Must Chew Its Food Properly—How It Is Made.

I have a horse which when fed in an open manger, eats his feed so rapidly that it is not properly chewed and therefore does him little good. The accompanying cut shows a device which I employ to make him eat slowly, writes Monroe Conklin, Jr., of Allegheny county, N. Y., in the Farm and Home. The box B is made of four boards 16 inches long and eight inches wide, nailed together so as to form a chute having no top or bottom. The chute is 16 inches high and 6 1/2 inches inside.

It is set upright in the corner of the manger farthest from the horse, and nailed securely in place after being lifted one to three inches from the bottom. The feed is poured into it and works down into the manger as the horse eats it away from below. What feed the horse cannot reach should be scraped out before the next feed is poured in, otherwise it would become sour and moldy.

RIDDING THE HOGS OF LICE

First Thing Is to Disinfect Pens, Bedding and Wallows—Then Use Powdered Staphisagria.

(By E. T. BAKER, Veterinarian, Idaho Experiment Station.)

A pig weighing 150 pounds will have approximately 12 pints of blood, each pint containing 7,680 drops, or a little over 92,000 drops of blood. If a louse abstracts a drop a day, and if a louse is boarding several thousand lice, it is easy to see where the profit goes when "hogs don't pay."

It is worse than useless to "dope" the pig with "lice killer" without disinfecting pens, bedding and, in the spring, the wallow.

First, burn all the loose, dry straw, clean out manure; spray the pen floors, walls, beams, troughs and every crevice with a ten per cent. solution of formalin or a half-gallon of formalin to five gallons of water. Creolin may be added to wallow in warm weather, say half a pint to a large wallow.

Then dust on each pig powdered staphisagria. This will cause the average louse to homestead elsewhere.

Feed Clean Grain.

Put the grain through the fanning mill before feeding it to the horses. It will not only mean a cleaner, healthier ration for the teams, but the grain that passes through them will not be full of noxious weed seeds to be carried to the field with the manure, where they propagate countless numbers of weed pests next season.

Warming the Calf.

If the calf comes on a cold day and you did not give the cow liberty to lick the baby, the calf may be chilled through. Get busy. Rub it dry with hay or cloths and blanket the little fellow until it quits shivering.

THE SMART SEPARATE COAT

A FASHION DEMAND

Straight, simple, almost severe of line are many of the long, separate coats. Others are belted and trimmed to give the effect of a suit. With the increasing popularity of the one-piece dress a coat of this sort is almost a necessity. The soft velours and fur fabrics appeal as cold crisp dress approach, but the smooth stuffs and tweeds and serges are always appropriate.

One of the smartest and most practical of this style of coats with this season was of brownish-tan, an almost invisible mixture of red and blue, and called in tobacco brown broadcloth. This is an excellent selection for 1913. This model would also be attractive in black, navy blue or grey.

A dainty, graceful afternoon dress for the boarder school girl is shown in suit. The skirt is a peg-top and the blouse comes over a natty little surplice vest. This may be developed and effectively in printed taffeta, featuring some of the new color combinations—blues, greens and brick red—with a plain color for the vest and cuffs.

Size it may be made with 4 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

Model shown in sizes 16, 17 and 18. No 8011—sleeves 16, 17 and 18, length 48 inches.

Business, Not Friendship.

The friendship that keeps a ledger and is always balancing accounts is not friendship at all. The fear that one may give more to his brother than he receives from him, that must have every favor returned as though it were a loan, every gift, visit, invitation, even expression of affection, paid back in kind—that may be a pleasant business proposition, but it has no claim to be called friendship.—Great Thoughts.

Not Her Fault.

"Ellen, I'm tired of your neglect and carelessness. Just look at all that dust lying about on the furniture. It's six weeks old at the very least." "Then it's no fault of mine. You know very well, ma'am, that I've been with you only four weeks."—Harper's Magazine.

A Santa Paper Chase

WE were puzzled about the children's Christmas, for all the little nieces, nephews and grandchildren were coming to the farm, as usual, says a writer in the Country Gentleman. Year after year we had had the common Christmas tree presentation of gifts until this method had quite lost its flavor. Resolved upon some substitute for it, we chanced upon the excellent one of a Santa Claus paper chase.

Early in the afternoon all the children were gathered together, and much to their bewilderment, each was handed an empty grain sack. They were then told that Santa Claus was unusually wary that year and that not ten minutes before he had been spied out of doors disappearing with his pack. He was dressed, as in other years, in red with white trimmings and seemed to be dropping bits of red and green paper behind him. Where he dropped both red and green at the same time there was surely a gift hidden, and that place must not be passed until the gift had been found and given to the one whose name was upon it.

The children could scarcely wait to be bundled into their outer garments and set off after elusive Santa in high glee. It would be useless to tell the many strange places to which they were led by his paper trail and where gifts were excavated. The hayloft, hollow tree trunks, even the mouth of a muskrat's hole, yielded strange packets. At length all sacks were well filled, and Santa Claus was overtaken just in time to prevent his concealment of toothsome boxes of homemade toffee, grandma's contribution. Dragging Santa Claus, who was none other than one of the uncles in appropriate disguise, into their midst, the children bounded in, laughing and rosy cheeked, to investigate their prizes. As they were doing this they kept bubbling with merriment over their highly successful Santa Claus paper chase and exclaiming that it had been "heaps and heaps and heaps" more fun than an indoor Christmas tree.

Long Sentences.

For the longest sentence on record we must go to the French. In "Les Misérables" Victor Hugo has one sentence that runs through a hundred lines, and earlier in the book, in one of the chapters descriptive of Waterloo, there are over fifty lines without a full stop. England's record rests under official patronage, for it would appear to be the seventh section of the foreign enlistment act, which does not stop until it has very nearly reached its six hundredth word.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

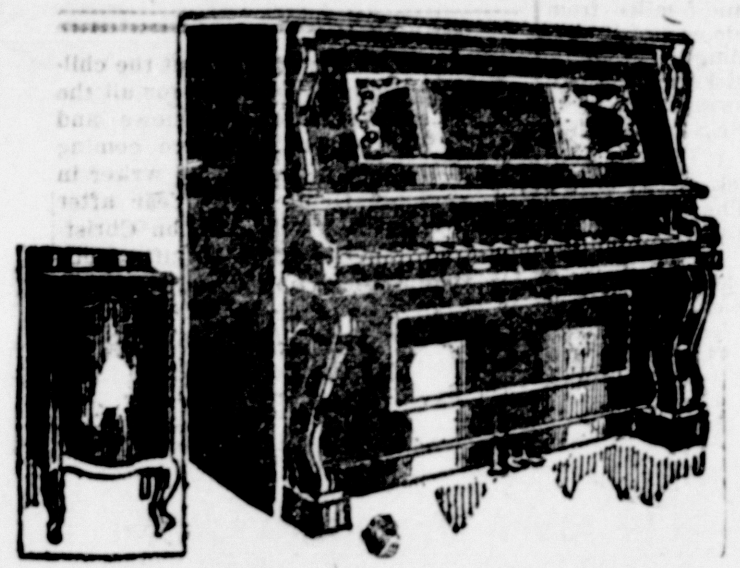

Adds Healthful Qualities to the Food

Prof. Prescott, of the University of Michigan, explains why Royal Baking Powder adds healthful qualities to the food.

Testifying before the Pure Food Committee of Congress, the Professor stated that fruit acids were excellent articles of food and that of these cream of tartar, the acid of grapes, held rank with the highest both in itself and its effect in the process of leavening and baking. He regarded the results from cream of tartar baking powder as favorable to health. Scientists and hygienists are in accord with this opinion.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar.

COMMITTEE MAY AID SUFFRAGISTS

To Report That Amendment Be Considered.

SPEAKERS SCORE HEFLIN

Alabama Women Poured Out Their Wrath on Congressman For Opposing the "Cause."

Washington, Dec. 6.—The committee on rules of the house of representatives concluded its hearings of the representatives of woman suffrage and the representatives of the opposition to the granting of votes for women.

At the final session Mrs. Catherine W. McCulloch, of Chicago, took charge of the suffrage side of the contention and presented more than two-score of three-minute orators. The anti had the presence on their speakers' list of Hon. J. Tom Hefflin, of Alabama. For the suffragists Representative Frank Mondell, of Wyoming, made the concluding address.

Following the hearings it became known that the committee is not disposed to grant the full request of the suffragists that a special house committee be created to take up the consideration of the suffrage problem and to the known officially as "the house committee on equal suffrage." It is pointed out by several members of the committee that the answer to the women's plea will be a specific recommendation by the rules committee to the committee on election of president, vice president and members of congress, for the consideration of the general subject of equalizing the suffrage and the consideration of the suggested suffrage amendment to the constitution.

Objection to this disposal of the plea is made that present circumstances and in view of the pronouncement of President Wilson that he wants the subject of direct primaries considered at this session, the committee above mentioned will have its hands full.

Nevertheless, it is likely that the recommendation will be made as suggested. In his speech Mr. Hefflin pulled down the starry bannant and wrapped it around the sun and moon, then he decorated the combination with roses, lilies of the valley and night blooming cereus. His peroration was grandiloquent and he succeeded in bringing down upon his head direct attack from the Alabama women who spoke for suffrage in the argument in rebuttal.

Mrs. Oscar Hundley, of Birmingham; Mrs. Baldridge, of Huntsville; and Mrs. P. J. Jacobs, of Birmingham, poured out the vitals of their wrath on Mr. Hefflin's sleek head, while that gentleman, sitting with the committee, smiled and seemingly appreciated the hurricane as much as any one present in the hearing room.

Miss Helen Todd, of California, endeavored to confute the statements made by the anti-suffragists that woman suffrage in California, after less than two years, was waning in popularity. She ascribed to the women voters of California the enactment of the state eight-hour law for women, the mothers' pension law, the advanced child labor law and other measures for the protection of the mothers and the youth of that state.

FIRE AT BOWERS' BEACH

Ten Cottages Are Destroyed—Dover Firemen Aid.

Dover, Del., Dec. 6.—Ten cottages were destroyed by fire in Bowers' Beach, Kent county's main summer resort, on the Delaware bay.

The blaze, which started in Chandler's store, threatened for several hours to wipe out all the houses on the creek. The loss was $12,000.

Messages were sent to Dover for help, as the local volunteer firemen were unable to cope with the flames. Upon the arrival of the Dover firemen with their chemical engine they fought the blaze from the north, saving the large hotel, the ent cottage and some smaller cottages on the Bowers side of the river.

Texas Shoots a Mexican.

Brownsville, Tex., Dec. 6.—Juan Gullar, a Mexican, was shot here when W. A. Rutledge, a jeweler, opened fire on J. J. Hainesworth, whom Rutledge accuses of wrecking his home. An investigation has been ordered by the federal authorities because of the delicate relations between this country and Mexico. Gullar will recover, but Hainesworth probably will die.

2 Shot, 1 Dying, in Indianapolis Strike
Indianapolis, Dec. 6.—Two strike-breakers were shot, one probably fatally, when a crowd of striking teamsters and sympathizers attacked a wagon of the Cohn Transfer company in West Washington street. Jacob Sonnenfeld, of Chicago, was shot through the neck and his injuries are believed to be fatal.

MRS. PANKHURST COLLAPSES IN JAIL

Militant Leader Succumbs to Hunger and Thirst Strike.

Exeter, Eng., Dec. 6.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, is said to be in a state of collapse, having started both a hunger and thirst strike since her arrest aboard the Majestic.

The threat of the militant suffragettes to resort to violent methods of revenge for the arrest of their leader, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, was put into effect with the destruction of the Kelly mansion at Wemyss Bay Scotland; several attempts to destroy letters by pouring acid into mail boxes in Exeter and numerous isolated cases of window smashing.

Moreover, it was stated that the women had a plan to do something sensational within the next twenty-four hours, and the police everywhere kept a strict watch.

Passengers on the liner Majestic, on which Mrs. Pankhurst made the voyage across the Atlantic, told of the indignation of the travelers at being detained for over an hour in Plymouth harbor in order to enable the police to outfit the suffragettes who planned to rescue Mrs. Pankhurst. As one American put it, "All this to arrest one little woman."

The English press also is inclined to sneer at the elaborate police plans. The Manchester Guardian remarks: "There was an absurd disproportion between the actual danger of disorder or rescue and the plans of the authorities." The Westminster Gazette says, "It is absurd to describe the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst as a triumph for the police."

SAVED WOMAN FROM FIRE

Men Lock Arms and Fight Way to Room Where She Lay Sick in Bed.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 6.—Children playing with matches in the home of Patrick Cahill, Cork Lane, Pittston, set fire to the house and then ran away, leaving Mrs. Anne Feeney, who was ill in bed, in danger of the blaze.

The house was soon enveloped in flames and the cries of Mrs. Feeney could be heard begging for help. Men tried to rush through the flames, but the smoke and fire drove them back.

Finally a half dozen men locked hands and fought their way to the room in which Mrs. Feeney was. They threw blankets about her and then battled with the flames until they had reached safety.

SLAYER ON HUNGER STRIKE

Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 6.—With forty days more of life before him, John Shushinski began a hunger strike to cheat the gallows.

Shushinski, who killed his roommate while the latter was sleeping, was convicted, and Sheriff P. J. Murphy read the death warrant to him, the date of the execution being fixed for Jan. 15.

Shushinski heard the reading in silence and refused to speak a word to the sheriff or his party, but later declared his intention of starving himself to death.

"I will give Mrs. Pankhurst some pointers; just watch me," he declared. The prison officials say that Shushinski went on a hunger strike several months ago, but was talked out of it by his spiritual adviser. They will not feed him forcibly in order to keep him alive, they say.

NATION-WIDE PRIMARY MAY HALT G.O.P. REFORM

Wilson's Program May do Away With 1910 Conventions.

Washington, Dec. 6.—The issue of direct presidential primaries, brought into public discussion by President Wilson's message, promises to be an important factor in the deliberations of the Republican national committee here on Dec. 16.

Many politicians believe that congress may provide primaries that will do away with the need of any nominating conventions for the next presidential campaign.

The decision of the law committee of the national committee leaves only one important change in Republican rules to be made by a national convention. That relates to the basis of representation.

While Republican leaders believe the national committee will call a convention for March or April, some thought the direct primary plan might influence some committeemen against it. It was pointed out that, if a direct primary law were passed before the 1916 elections, the need for a change of Republican representation would disappear.

Senator Jones, a member of the law committee, said:

"I am in favor of some form of a direct primary. One plan that appears to be sound would provide for direct primaries in the states, with national conventions, in which delegates would sit in proportion to the vote of the states. Each state would apportion its delegates according to the strength of the respective party candidates, and the national convention would make a final choice."

HOLIDAY SUGGESTIONS

Once people gave to their friends and loved ones at Christmas time gifts that were pretty but of no value whatever, things that were nice to look upon but only in the way after the merriment of the Christmas season had passed. This is all changed now and no one cares to receive a gift that cannot be put to some real use. Right here in our store you can find the things which can be used, the things, which will please the eye, and the things which will delight your friends when you present them on Christmas morning.

NECKWEAR

What is more delight and satisfaction to the boy, youth and man than a supply of collars and a collection of pretty neckties? The latest shapes in collars and the prettiest ties in town will be found right here. Full line of cuffs.

STOCKINGS

Nothing is more provoking than to find your socks or stockings in holes just when you are in a hurry to dress. Men's, women's and children's stockings here from which to choose. The kind where holes don't come soon.

SUITS and OVERCOATS

Your father, your husband, your brother would delight in a new suit at Christmas time. You can have them pick what they want and then present it to them Christmas morning. The early buyer has an immense stock from which to choose. If your relatives have already bought their fall and winter suits, how about a warm, good looking, handsome overcoat or raincoat. Prices to suit all.

And there are the young boys in the family—the little codgers. Suits and overcoats that will make them glad not only on Christmas day but throughout the entire winter. Come in and let us show them to you.

HATS

Hats and caps, for men, boys and children. Dress hats and hats for everyday. Wouldn't your boy enjoy a good warm hat for the winter school days.

SHIRTS

Dress shirts and working shirts. The men and boys in the family can't have too many of them. Cheap shirts and higher priced ones for dress.

SWEATERS

Just the thing for the man who must be out these winter days and fine for the boys' school wear and winter sport. Pretty shades.

GLOVES

No matter what you buy for the various members of the family you will fail to hit the mark unless gloves are in the list. Kid gloves for dress, woolen gloves for everyday wear and canvas gloves for rough work. Prices to suit all.
